

INTERNAL TRAINING COURSES IN LONDON 2008

RESPOND
from hurting to healing

Fri 22 February                      Working with young people who display sexually re-active behaviour

This course will look into some of the causes of sexually inappropriate behaviour in young people with learning disabilities. It will consider the emotional issues that may lead to this behaviour in an attempt to gain an understanding of the young person's perspective. It will explore the perceptions of sexualised behaviour and how this may influence how the young person is treated. The course will also examine the challenging area of how to acknowledge the young person's perspective whilst at the same time managing risk of offending against others.

Tues 15 April                              Supporting people with learning disabilities who have experienced loss and bereavement

Participants on the course will gain some knowledge of the processes of grief. Particular attention will be given to what may make it more difficult for a person with a learning disability to grieve healthily. Different sorts of loss will also be considered. A variety of interventions will be explored which may be used to support people with learning disabilities both before an impending death as well as during a period of bereavement.

Fri 6 June                                      Supporting people with learning disabilities who have been sexually abused

This course is a chance to explore the main issues in supporting people who have been sexually abused. Participants will have the opportunity to define sexual abuse, to describe how it occurs and why people with learning disabilities are especially vulnerable to abuse generally. The key legal and policy reforms in the field of sexual abuse and learning disability will be identified. The ways in which people may demonstrate that they have been abused (either in the past or present) will be explored. Participants will be given the opportunity to develop new skills and insights into supporting people with learning disabilities who have been abused.

Mon 15 September & Tues 16 September                      Sex Offending: risk assessment, management and treatment (2 days)

This two-day course will look at some of the causes of offending. It will consider the assessment and management of risk, paying particular attention to the needs of people with learning disabilities who may display offending behaviour. Time will be spent examining policy and practice. The use of a psychodynamic approach and the possibilities of group work will be explored.

Tues 11 November                              Supporting older people with learning disabilities who have dementia

This course will provide information on dementia and learning disability and consider some pro-active ideas for services working with older people. It will also explore strategies for providing the best support to people who have dementia and to their fellow residents living with them.

To be confirmed: January 2009                              People with learning disabilities as vulnerable witnesses: investigative interviewing and achieving best evidence

Participants will consider the effects of the investigative process on the learning disabled witness and their supporters; learn about key aspects of the law and social policy relevant to people with learning disabilities; reflect on key stages in the journey from disclosure to courtroom; learn best practice in conducting investigations where people with learning disabilities have alleged abuse.
