Developing outcomes for patients and improving services

The future of services is not just about how much activity is undertaken, rather about the impact on patient care. As commissioning becomes much more of a local process with GPs at the centre, it will be imperative that the achievements of your service are transparent. Simply put, if your service cannot demonstrate that your interventions are making a difference to the health needs of your local population, there is a real possibility that your funding could be withdrawn and the service will no longer be commissioned!

This one day programme is designed to help clinicians and managers to take a closer look at developing useable and practical outcome measures so that they can respond to commissioner, staff and patients to enable delivery of quality services which also contribute towards reducing waste and inefficiency.

A practical and hands on approach will be used to guide delegates and those who book before the end of November 2010 will be able to access free support to help kick start their local process!

Dates: 23rd November in Bolton, 30th November in London, 24th February in Birmingham

Developing Effective and Convincing Business Cases

Back by popular demand, this one day programme is designed to provide an insight into writing short and concise business cases. For example those which are required for everyday type of use such as, bidding for more resources, proposing changes in service and offering or looking for support to pursue a research project.

These workshops are aimed at all those who want to know how to write simple yet effective Business Cases within an NHS context. Clinicians and managers alike will benefit from these workshops as well as how to access the free post event support that will be provided to delegates who sign up before November 2010!

Dates: 6th October in Bolton, 19th October in London, 27th January in Birmingham

Reducing Costs and improving quality through Service Transformation

With the financial squeeze facing the NHS many services are faced with making tough decisions as to where they can save money. Rather than adopt a "rapid cost reduction strategy", there is another way, one of adopting a more "sustainable cost reduction strategy" looking at service transformation achieved through review and redesign leading to greater efficiency and reduction of waste.

This one day programme will greatly benefit clinicians and managers leading service changes to examine areas of inefficiency and consider practical approaches to be used locally, helping them to deliver quality, innovation, productivity and cost savings!

Dates: 7th October in Bolton, 20th October in London, 23rd February in Birmingham
