Trauma informed care

We often struggle to understand the reasons why people use behaviours that challenge as a means of communication. This event will introduce the concept of Trauma informed care and look at how this model can be developed in services for people who have learning disabilities. The model proposes that trauma may be a factor in the onset of behaviours that challenge, but also that the response of services and supports can make things worse by delivering interventions that are in themselves traumatic including restrictive physical interventions and seclusion.

Aims

The aim of the day is to inform people about the model and help them think about their service philosophy when trauma is taken into consideration in how we support service users.

Who should attend?

The day is aimed at practitioners, teachers, support workers, case managers and services managers who have a professional interest in supporting children, young people and adults across a variety of settings who are described as challenging and may exhibit aggressive or self injurious behaviour.

This event has been CPD Certified. Attendance will allow you to gain CPD points towards your Continuous Professional Development requirements.
