

Positive Behaviour Support

James Clephane

Castlebeck's reputation for delivering relevant and thought-provoking educational events has enabled us, for the first time, to offer a free one-day course for nurses who specialise (or who would like to) in Learning Disabilities.

We believe that the more we know what we are doing and the more support we have, the less challenging the circumstances become. The aim of this day is to share views on the nursing process and how it extends to meet today's evidence based best practice to improve the lives of those we support.

James Clephane is a Behaviour Analyst, IABA, APT and a Registered Nurse RNMH who has worked in the field of learning disabilities for 27 years; specialising in behaviours which challenge and associated complex needs.

Attendance Certificate (PREPP)

Programme:

10.30am Coffee & Registration

The day will be split in to two halves, nicely interrupted by lunch. The morning sessions will look at steps one to four and the afternoon steps five to eight. There will be plenty of time for discussion and questions after each session.

2.30pm End
