Delivering Better Services for People with a Learning Disability

Course Aims

This training course looks at how valuing people with a learning disability is key to delivering better services. It will look at how this can be achieved while achieving value for money, thereby resulting in positive outcomes for all.

It will develop understanding of how people with a learning disability have been and continue to be, devalued by society and the impact that this has. Devaluation leads to exclusion, segregation and a denial of basic human rights.

This course enables delegates to consider and answer the question “Are the ways in which services are currently delivered making a positive impact on improving the quality of life of those who receive the service, or actually a barrier to improving quality of life outcomes”.

Course includes

- An understanding of how people with a learning disability are devalued and how it can affect them.
- An insight into how history can repeat itself and the lessons we need to learn.
- An examination of how the delivery of services can have a positive or negative impact.
- How the quality of services delivered or commissioned can be measured.

Designed for

Anyone who has a role supporting or caring for someone with a learning disability, individuals delivering services to people with a learning disability and individuals commissioning services for people with a learning disability.
