Dementia in Learning Disability: a 21st Century Challenge

As people age, their needs often increase. This is true for the first generation of people with learning disabilities who are growing older in their local communities. In addition, more and more people with a learning disability are now developing dementia. BILD and Mentaur are organising a cutting-edge national conference on "Dementia in Learning Disability: a 21st Century Challenge". The conference will allow you to access the latest information and gain practical experience in this increasingly important area through a workshop based interactive day supported by experts in the field.

Target audience

- Carers and families of people with a learning disability and dementia
- Managers and staff of learning disability supports and services
- Commissioners and care managers in learning disability services
- All provider organisations in learning disability including domiciliary care
- Staff working in hospitals and learning disability community teams
- Policy makers and funding decision makers

Advanced booking discount

Book by Friday 23 October 2010 and receive a further 10% discount on each booking.

Outcomes for delegates

To leave with a practical knowledge and understanding of the potential impact of the following for people with a learning disability and dementia:

- The National Dementia Strategy
- Early identification
- Changing the environment including the use of assisted technology
- Relevant person centred approaches in support planning for people with learning disabilities and dementia
- Management of risk and positive behaviour support
- The carer's perspective
- Respect and support for end of life and dying
- Equipping the workforce to deliver appropriate support and services

Exhibitions and Posters

There will be a number of exhibition and poster stands available for use by people and organisations who wish to promote or present information about their projects or services to this key audience.

If you wish to apply for exhibition or poster space please contact the Conference Team at BILD on
