ABOUT THE STUDY DAY

Eye Gaze has long been considered to offer vast potential as an access method for communication; in the last few years it has been emerging as a means of accessing AAC and other technology.

This Communication Matters study day is an essential guide for any professional working in AAC or Assistive Technology with an interest in how eye gaze technology can be used to access communication and technology. The day will explore this cutting edge topic, including the foundations of eye pointing for communication, an overview of the potential of eye control of technology by a leading expert, a chance to try the latest developments from suppliers, and an opportunity to hear about and share experiences in the use of eye gaze for interaction.

This study day has been developed by Communication Matters because of the large amount of recent interest in this area. It is anticipated that this day will be very popular, so be sure to book early to avoid disappointment.
