

EasyRead guidance newsflash

Thursday 18th November 2010

This is an EasyRead of today's news from the Government.

The Government has a new guide out today on making better EasyRead information for people with learning disabilities.

Inspired Services is proud to say that all of our EasyRead meets or is better than what the new guide wants.

EasyRead uses simple words and pictures to tell the message.

This guide will help organisations understand how they can talk with all disabled people, including the 1.5 million people with learning disabilities in the UK.

People with learning disabilities should always help make EasyRead to make sure it is easy to understand.

Care Services Minister
Paul Burstow said:

“People with learning disabilities need to be able to get information which is easy to understand so they can make choices and decisions about their own lives.

“This guide will help government give better information to people with learning disabilities, which will help them have a more equal role in society.”

Minister for Disabled People
Maria Miller said:

“Having clear, simple information about public services helps everyone, not just disabled people.”

Inspired services is your one stop shop for accessible information

Our EasyRead service meets:

- the Government's new EasyRead guidance
- the European EasyRead standard
- and is working towards the Information Standard for health and social care information.

You can read the government's guide to EasyRead on the internet here:

www.tinyurl.com/dhEasyRead