Transition, Trauma and Psychotherapy in the Lives of People with Disabilities

An Institute for Psychotherapy and Disability conference.

Friday 14th March 2014

Resource for London,
356 Holloway Road,
London N7 6PA

About the conference

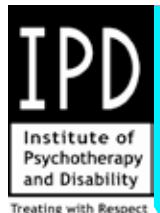

Moving from childhood, to adolescence and to adulthood. Dealing with the onset of illness. Processing the losses inherent in growing old. Adapting to changes in one's body and physical being. Dealing with mortality and death.

These are enormous challenges for us all, but particularly for people with disabilities. This groundbreaking day will bring together leaders in the field of services for people with disabilities to examine how best we can help our clients deal with the trauma that often accompanies life changes, and what role psychotherapy can play.

Alongside keynote presentations from internationally renowned speakers, the day will feature a range of workshops examining various aspects of transitioning from one life stage to another. A range of therapeutic approaches will be explored, including psychoanalytic, psychodynamic, humanistic, play and creative techniques.

The Institute of Psychotherapy and Disability is a UKCP Listing Member Organisation that exists to develop, train and work with people with disabilities.
