Learning Disability Awareness

This course is a great way to understand more about people with learning disabilities we may work with or just meet in life.

Course Aims

This training will help you work and act in a more inclusive way by understanding more about the issues affecting people with learning disabilities.

Course includes

The session will look at the experiences of people with learning disabilities and how services and society affect their lives. The course will help you examine how you can contribute to this effect being a positive one.

During the course you'll hear about people's own experiences and look at how you can have a positive effect.

You will be given the opportunity to

- hear people's stories
- examine your own views and attitudes
- learn about the barriers people with learning disabilities face
- explore how you can have a positive effect when working with people with learning disabilities.

How the course is delivered

The trainers on this course are powerful self-advocates with learning disabilities and are experienced in sharing their experiences and challenging other's perceptions.

Designed for

Anyone who's working life means that they come into contact with people with learning disabilities, especially in support / care settings but is relevant to people in all sectors including, leisure, retail or transport.
