About the Partners:

The National Patient Safety Agency (NPSA) works to improve patient safety in the NHS. By collecting, analysing and understanding information on error we can develop practical solutions that minimise the risk of it happening again. In essence, we provide the NHS with a memory.

Our remit includes: helping NHS organisations deal with performance concerns of individual doctors and dentists through our National Clinical Assessment Service (NCAS); overseeing ethical safeguards for those involved in NHS research through our Central Office for Research Ethics Committees (COREC), specific aspects of hospital nutrition, cleaning and design, and responsibility for the three national Confidential Enquiries.

The Royal College of Psychiatrists is the professional and educational body for psychiatrists in the United Kingdom and the Republic of Ireland. The College has been in existence since 1841. The College's aims are:

- Setting standards and promoting excellence in mental health care
- Improving understanding through research and education
- Leading, representing, training and supporting psychiatrists
- Working with patients, carers and their organisations.

The College's Education and Training Centre supports these aims by providing a range of learning and development opportunities for psychiatrists and other mental health care professionals.

Patient Safety for People with Learning Disabilities

Chair: Professor Sheila Hollins, President of the Royal College of Psychiatrists

Keynote: Ms Sue Osborn and Ms Susan Williams, Joint Chief Executive, NPSA

This is the First National Conference on Patient Safety for People with Learning Disabilities and it aims to provide delegates with the most up to date information on current initiatives and share best practice and ideas for improving safety at a local level.

In February 2004, the National Patient Safety Agency (NPSA) published a report entitled 'Understanding the Patient Safety Issues for People with Learning Disabilities'. The report highlighted the key patient safety issues and concerns for this care group. Since then the NPSA have been working to further develop safer ways of working for people with learning disabilities. The conference will showcase their work and raise important recommendations from other key reports and initiatives.
