Introduction

The annual health check is the most comprehensive assessment ever of performance in the NHS in England. It asks two key questions: are NHS trusts getting the basics right, and are they making and sustaining progress? To provide the answers, we assess the performance of every trust in the country against a range of standards and targets set by Government.

This document presents the performance ratings for all NHS trusts in the 2006/2007 annual health check, along with some key facts about the assessment process.

Key facts

- All trusts receive a rating made up of two parts – a score for quality of services and a score for use of resources.
- Both parts of the rating are scored on a four-point scale of “excellent”, “good”, “fair”, and “weak”.

Scoring trusts on quality of services

The quality of services score is an aggregation of the trust’s scores when assessed against the Government’s core standards, existing national targets and new national targets. Each of these three components is scored on a four-point scale, as follows:

Core standards: “fully met”, “almost met”, “partly met” and “not met”.

Existing national targets: “fully met”, “almost met”, “partly met” and “not met”.

New national targets: “excellent”, “good”, “fair” and “weak”.

If a trust scores “not met” for either core standards or existing national targets, we automatically give it a score of “weak” for overall quality of services. (Mental health trusts’ assessments for existing national targets are the exception to this rule.) This is the only circumstance in which a trust can be scored “weak” for overall quality of services.

Scores for quality of services are not directly comparable between different types of NHS trust. This is mainly because some existing and new national targets do not apply to every type of trust.

Brief explanations of the components

Core standards: The 24 standards that all organisations in the NHS should meet, published by the Government in 2004 and updated in 2006. They cover all aspects of health and healthcare, including safety, clinical effectiveness, cost effectiveness and public health. As part of the annual health check, we ask every trust in England to assess its performance against the core standards and to publicly declare this information.

Existing national targets: Targets that show whether NHS trusts are maintaining the levels of service set by the Government during the period from 2003 to 2006. Our assessment of trusts’ performance against these targets is one component of the quality of services part of the rating they receive in the annual health check.

New national targets: The Government sets targets of expected future performance for all NHS trusts, with the aim of improving the health of the population of England.

Trusts are responsible for progressing towards and ultimately achieving these targets. We therefore assess each trust's performance against them annually.

Scoring trusts on use of resources

The score we give trusts for use of resources is derived from the work of other regulators:

- For all NHS trusts except foundation trusts, this work is carried out by the Audit Commission and the local auditors who evaluate the performance of trusts throughout England.
- For NHS foundation trusts, we use annual financial risk ratings compiled by Monitor, the independent regulator of foundation trusts.

A trust's status (foundation or non-foundation) on 31 March determines which method is used to assess its use of resources during the financial year that follows (1 April to 31 March).

Structure of the 2006/2007 annual health check

Summaries of trusts' performance ratings for 2006/2007

The following pages contain three tables that provide the following information:

- Table 1: an alphabetical listing of all NHS trusts in England, showing the overall performance rating that we awarded each trust for 2006/2007 and for the previous year. This rating is made up of two parts: the score that we gave for the quality of a trust's services and the score we gave for its use of resources. The table also shows trusts' performance ratings for 2005/2006.
- Table 2: ranked scores for quality of services and for each of the components of these scores, organised by type of trust.
- Table 3: ranked scores for use of resources only, organised by type of trust.

Please note that 90 of the 394 trusts that the Healthcare Commission assessed in 2006/2007 are newly created or have been merged or reconfigured since our 2005/2006 assessment. In these cases, there is no 2005/2006 score shown for comparison with the 2006/2007 score (indicated by a dash).
