Prader-Willi Syndrome: Multidisciplinary Training Day

Friday 20 May, 2011, 9.30am –
4.30m

Seminar Room 1, Michael Rutter
Centre, Maudsley Hospital, De
Crespigny Park, London SE5 8AF

The central theme of this conference is the specialist mental health needs of children and young people with Prader-Willi Syndrome. We will cover the recent advances in research about PWS and how they are affecting treatments, and focus on understanding what services are needed and some of the assessments and treatments that may be provided. The day will involve discussions on assessment and treatment of complex cases, behavioural interventions for behavioural problems commonly encountered in PWS, important educational issues that need to be considered and management of residential and educational transitions.

This conference is particularly aimed at health and educational professionals, voluntary services and parents and carers. Internationally renowned experts from UK and the Mental Health of Learning Disabilities Team at the Maudsley Hospital will present on a range of practical topics aimed at people who live and work with someone with Prader-Willi Syndrome.

The Developmental Neuropsychiatry and Neuropsychology Service

We see children and adolescents up to age 18 from across the United Kingdom who have, or might have, neurodevelopmental disorders such as autism, Asperger syndrome, attention deficit hyperactivity disorder or learning disability with additional mental health or behaviour problems, as well as young people with psychological problems associated with head-injury, cerebral palsy, epilepsy or genetic conditions.

We have particular expertise in a number of rare genetic disorders, including Prader-Willi Syndrome. We offer assessment, diagnosis, consultation, liaison, treatment and support to young people and their families who have already had contact with local mental health services, as well as those who do not have access to a local service.
