T.A.G.I.

'That's A Great Idea'

Do you want to make some changes?

Make some choices?

Have some fun?

Get your own action plan?

Then let's play T.A.G.I.

T.A.G.I. is an accessible and interactive game, designed by adults with learning disabilities at the Map Squad in Tower Hamlets.

T.A.G.I. stands for ‘That’s A Great Idea’, the term used to describe the original need for and development of the game, by its creators.

Players explore their own idea with supporters and game facilitators.

T.A.G.I. can transform its shape and dimensions to meet venue and group requirements and is designed with recycled materials and pieces that can be added and taken away.

It comes with a ready made accessible toolkit, dice, play cards and questions.

T.A.G.I . players take away an individual action plan that sets out what they have decided during game play.

The action plan helps each person to speak up and feel more confident to take their idea forward and tell other people about what they want to do next.
