Valuing people now – making it happen

About the conference

By October, the revised Valuing People Now – with changes following public consultation – should be out. This conference is designed to:

- help you understand the detail of what it says
- hear from and ask questions to people leading Valuing People Now
- share practical ideas about how to make Valuing People Now happen in your area – based on the evidence of what does and does not work well.

The workshops

The workshops will be an opportunity for sharing ideas you can use in an interactive way with participants (rather than more sessions of people giving you their personal opinions!)

The conference participants

The Conference participants will be the people whose job it is to make Valuing People Now happen and can be active contributors to the day, so learning is from more than just the main speakers.

About NDT

The NDT is an independent, not-for-profit organisation that works to improve policies, services and opportunities for people who are disadvantaged. When the NDT began in 1976, we were only concerned with people who have learning disabilities, but our work now includes other groups of people – especially people with mental health needs.

For more information please visit www.ndt.org.uk

About the Tizard Centre

The Tizard Centre is one of the leading UK academic groups working in learning disability and community care. The Tizard Centre is part of the School of Social Policy, Sociology and Social Research at the University of Kent at Canterbury. The primary aims of the Tizard Centre are:

- to advance knowledge about the relationship between the organisation of community care services and their outcomes, and
- to help service agencies (both purchasers and providers) develop their own competence to provide and sustain high quality, comprehensive community care services

Pavilion in partnership with The Tizard Centre published The Tizard Learning Disability Review, a quarterly practice-based journal for learning disability services. For more information please visit www.pavpub.com/ldrflyer
